

AIR TRAGEDY TAKES THE LIVES OF 13 IN A PITTSBURGH CRASH

Four Women and Nine Men Meet Death As Huge Air-Liner is Wrecked

MANEUVERING TO LAND

Entire Human Cargo Hurl'd By Impact to Front of Ship; Cause Undetermined

By Sydney H. Eiges
L. A. S. Staff Correspondent
PITTSBURGH, Mar. 26.—(INS)—Another horrible tragedy of the skies today added 13 mutilated victims, four of them women, to the nation's death toll from air disasters.

In shattered bits of wreckage of a huge New York to Chicago twin motor-driven TWA Douglas transport plane, Federal, State and county investigators sought the cause for the disaster that sent them to sudden death on a sloping hillside a mere five miles from the city-county airport where the craft was maneuvering to land.

Ten passengers, three of them women, the pilot, co-pilot and the trim little stewardess, the entire human cargo, died in the forward part of the ship into which they were hurled by the impact. So terrific was the speed at which the ship struck the ground nose first, that the motors were completely buried and the cabin was crushed like an eggshell.

Another pilot flying overhead saw the plane plummet to destruction, spewing its victims into the field before the horrified eyes of a man and wife driving only a few feet away.

The crash occurred at 6:35 p. m. last night, as the veteran Capt. Larry Bohnett, of Jersey City, the pilot, and his co-pilot, Howard E. Warwick, of East Orange, were maneuvering to land. Several preliminary theories, including motor trouble and excessive ice on the wings were advanced today in an attempt to explain the plane's sudden plunge to the earth as it spiraled down from a height estimated at 2000 feet.

Besides the crew, victims of the crash which occurred about 1000 feet from the old Clifton cross-roads where stage coaches passed in an earlier era were:

E. J. Fleming and C. R. Lewers, of Kansas City, Mo., both connected with the Standard Oil Company, of New York; Miss Mary Black, of New York, employed in the cashier's department of a food concern who was taking her first plane ride to visit her sister in Chicago; Miss Frances Reed, a dietitian, of New York; Hason Haxi, an Albanian of Chicago, affiliated with a motor truck company, and the following who boarded the plane in Camden: E. G. Neill, of Minneapolis, a publishing company representative; Miss Pauline Trask, of the William Penn Charter School, at Germantown, Pa.; Frederick D. Lehman, of Harrisburg, Pa., an insurance company representative, and H. Herman and E. Brazelton, of Elmhurst, Ill., fraternity brothers and close friends.

The crew was comprised of Bohnett, Warwick and Doris Hammons, the hostess, of Leedy, Okla. She did not share the good fortune of Nellie Granger who escaped in the Sun rare crash near Uniontown which claimed 11 lives.

Jack Frye, president of TWA, pronounced the plane in perfect mechanical condition and described weather conditions as "good."

"The Divine Tragedy" Is To Be Staged Tonight

EDDINGTON, Mar. 26.—"The Divine Tragedy," a drama in two episodes, will be staged by members of the Little Curtain Club, Gaston Presbyterian Church, in the Eddington Presbyterian Church, tonight at eight o'clock. This is a reverent portrayal of scenes attendant upon the crucifixion, and presented by the young people of Gaston Presbyterian Church.

The first episode is the prophecy on the part of John the Baptist, who foretells the impending tragedy, and who warns the people and a high priest who is present, to repent and make ready the way of the Lord.

The second episode is in the hall of Pontius Pilate; and participants are shown in Good Friday events that are seldom seen in pageantry. First there is Pontius Pilate and his wife Procula, the latter telling of her dream that warns her to set Jesus free. A representative of the Sanhedrin, who comes to influence Pilate against Jesus, and who is responsible for the change in Pilate's attitude, is seen. The centurion, Longinus, who describes the scene at the cross, is also on the scene. Throughout these events an old blind beggar moves, who loved His Saviour and whose experience expresses the meaning that Good Friday holds for all.

The entire play is in verse, but of such a meter that it is easily given and easily understood.

Thirteen Lose Lives in Air Catastrophe

Ten passengers, two pilots and a stewardess were killed when a TWA liner, flying in a fog near Pittsburgh, Pa., crashed against the side of Mount Lebanon. The ship was bound from Newark, N. J., to Chicago, with a stop scheduled at Pittsburgh. A Soundphoto view of the plane wreck is shown above. Since the first of the year there have been three major disasters in commercial aviation in the United States.

NAMED TO $10,000, POST

CHARLES A. WATERS

PITTSBURGH, Mar. 26.—State Treasurer Charles A. Waters yesterday was named Prothonotary for the Eastern District of the State Supreme Court to succeed Thomas Robbins, of Philadelphia, who resigned because of advanced age and impaired health. The appointment is effective on May 1, 1937, when Waters will end his term as State Treasurer. Pier Gannals, Prothonotary of the State Supreme Court, announced here it pays $10,000 a year, Waters' present salary.

YOUTHFUL BANDITS GIVEN LONG TERMS

All Are Sentenced To Eastern Penitentiary for Series of Crimes

STAGED HOLD-UP HERE

(By International News Service)
PHILADELPHIA, Mar. 26.—The six members of the "small change gang" were all sent to long terms in the Eastern Penitentiary shortly after noon yesterday by Judge Harry S. McDevitt.

Edward McGrath, 17, was sentenced to from 10 to 30 years; Robert Singley, five to 25 years; Everett Day, 19, 15 to 45 years; Thomas Welsh, 21, five to 25 years; Thomas McGrath, 17, 5 to 25 years; and Joseph Almerida, 16, 10 to 30 years.

All the defendants pleaded guilty to bills of indictment charging hold-ups, carrying weapons and stealing automobiles, earlier in the week, and Almerida pleaded guilty yesterday. Almerida was released from the Philadelphia General Hospital on Tuesday where he had been recovering.

MRS. PETER CURRAN DIES

Mrs. Bridget Curran (nee Boyle) wife of the late Peter J. Curran, died in Philadelphia yesterday. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

DIES IN NORRISTOWN

Arthur R. B. Fox, Norristown, past state president of the P. O. S. of A., and husband of the late Emma Fox, past state president of the P. O. of A., died recently in Norristown, following five years' illness. Both Mr. and Mrs. Fox were well known to a number of Bristolians.

FAVORITE BABY ELECTION LIST WILL BE CONFINED TO COMMUNITY LEADERS

GETTING MANY VOTES

As has been stated previously in these columns, only the names of the babies having 100,000 votes (or more) will be published in the regular list hereafter. This rule is made necessary to conserve space. It does not necessarily follow that those names will be dropped from the list permanently since they will be reinstated in the regularly published list when the total reaches the required figure.

If your favorite's name has less than 100,000 votes on its card at election headquarters, be certain to hustle in some merchant coupons or a subscription or two to the election editor today and keep the name in the list for the public support. Just a little effort will do the trick. It is the sincere desire of those most closely associated with the election of the COMMUNITY'S FAVORITE BABY that as many babies as possible be kept in the voting list but, like all other elections of consequence, the baby election is a competitive enterprise whereby some effort is necessary to claim the honors and the rewards.

Quite a number of the baby backers have come forward within the past few days with a substantial number of merchant coupons and in most instances, a subscription or two also, requesting that the votes be credited to some child whose vote had not yet reached the 100,000 mark. Some of these names will occupy prominent positions in Tuesday's lineup, whereas, only a few days ago a negligible number of votes were credited.

With sufficient time remaining and with a plentiful supply of merchant coupons to be had upon purchases from the co-operating stores, together with the liberal number of votes allowed upon subscription payments, who knows but that the ultimate winner of the election is some baby whose name occupies a place far down in the vote list now?

Elections are the most interesting things in the world if everyone is working for his or her favorite. Any let-down, even for just a brief period may mean the difference between a winner and a runner-up, or carried.

EXONERATED OF BLAME FOR CRASH KILLING SON

Jury Believes He Is Unable To Tell What Caused The Accident

PARENT GREATLY UPSET

His mind a blank as to what transpired immediately before his son Aaron Kriger, 18, was killed in an automobile accident on the Lincoln Highway at Oxford Valley, February 28th, Harry Kriger, Brooklyn, was unable to give any worthwhile testimony at a coroner's inquest here yesterday. Kriger drove the car from which his son was thrown.

The jury reasoned that undoubtedly Kriger's mind did go blank after the tragedy and their verdict was one of exoneration for the grief stricken father.

GLADYS R. YORTY

A beautiful, bouncing baby, indeed, is precious Gladys Yorty. She is plump and rosy—a splendid image of infant health and pucker. She has blue eyes, blonde hair and tips the scales at 18 pounds. Gladys is the eight-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Yorty, of 349 Jackson street, Bristol. Those most closely associated with her suspect her erstwhile efforts at baby talk to be rapid development of campaign oratory, since she is acquiring an unusual vocabulary for one so wee. Putting forth earnest effort to win the big Silver Loving Cup should be a happy assignment for this baby's supporters and there is evidence that some folks have a fixed opinion as to who should receive the honor. Mr. and Mrs. William Moss, of 528 Locust street, Bristol, are the grandparents of this little nominee.

IS NOW ON DUTY

Miss Edna Stephany has been named home economics representative for Bucks County, according to an announcement made by Amos Satterthwaite, Yardley, president of the Bucks County Agricultural Extension Association. W. Brooke Hall will serve as assistant to County Agent William F. Greenawalt.

Miss Stephany will succeed Miss Rhandena A. Armstrong, now a member of the Philadelphia Public School system. Miss Stephany resides in Lyndbrook, L. I. She graduated from Cornell University in home economics. Following her graduation, she took a dietetic internship at the Fifth Ave.

CHANGE IN FUNERAL

A change is announced in plans for the funeral of William Ernst, Sr., who died in Croydon yesterday. The service will be conducted on Monday at two p. m., in Tabor Lutheran Church, Philadelphia, by the Rev. Frederick Flothmeier. Interment will be made in Greenmount Cemetery. Friends may call at the home of the daughter of the deceased, Mrs. Otto Grupp, Jr., Croydon, Sunday after 3 p. m.

ELKS TO MEET

A special meeting of Bristol Lodge, No. 576, B. P. O. Elks, will take place on Monday evening, March 29th, in the Elks home, this session being for the purpose of initiating a class of candidates, and transacting other business that will accrue.

Mrs. Elizabeth Reynolds, Former Bristolian, Dies

A former resident of this borough, Mrs. Elizabeth Reynolds, wife of the late William Reynolds, died at the home of her daughter, in Jamaica, Long Island, Wednesday after an illness of several months. The deceased was the mother of Frank L. Wilson, 619 Race street.

The funeral will be held tomorrow, with service in Langhorne A. M. E. Church, at two p. m. Interment will be in Green Street Cemetery, Langhorne, with H. S. Rue Estate, funeral directors, in charge. Friends may call at the residence of Mr. Wilson, 619 Race street, tomorrow morning.

CANAL CO. IN SURPRISE MOVE TO KEEP WATERWAY

Company Said to Be Attempting to Sell Property as Water Route to Phila.

TO CONTEST ACTION

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 26.—A surprise move in the long, drawn-out controversy about the restoration of the historic and once-picturesque canal along the upper Delaware River, was made yesterday.

The Delaware Valley Protective Association has been notified by Grover C. Ladner, deputy Attorney General of Pennsylvania, that the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company has contested the State's claim of forfeiture in the Dauphin county court.

This is as great a surprise as it is a disappointment to the many association members and particularly to those with properties through which the canal had right-of-way.

A movement has already been started among these property owners between New Hope and other points along the canal to demand compensation from the canal company for property value depreciation due to the prolonged neglect of the canal.

It is alleged that the canal company is attempting to sell a right of way for the conveying of water to the City of Philadelphia and, with that in view, is holding whatever title it may possess to the canal as long as possible.

The Delaware Valley property holders who are planning a concerted action for compensation declare that the so-called "gentleman's agreement," which gave to the canal company the authority to convey and sell water and was nullified by the recent decisions of the State Supreme Court, is what the canal company hopes to revive.

Deputy Attorney General Ladner's letter to the association's secretary, William Francis Taylor, secretary, at Lumberville, is as follows: "I was surprised at the answer filed by the Delaware Division Canal Company, in which they contest the Commonwealth's claim of forfeiture. Since it was entirely different than I was led

Radio Chain Refuses To Broadcast Bill Discussion

PHILADELPHIA, Mar. 26.—The Columbia Broadcasting System has refused to permit The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company to devote a part of its regularly scheduled radio hour to talks on the Pennsylvania "Store Tax Bill." O. C. Adams, president of the Southern Division, The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, announced today.

The talks were to have been delivered by Miss Eleanor Davis, representing the viewpoint of the consumer, and G. A. Boyer, president of the Lehigh Valley Co-operative Farmers, representing the farmer's viewpoint. They had been prepared to call public attention to the bill's effect upon the farmer's market and to the increase in food prices which the chain stores state will be unavoidable if the bill is enacted. The bill has been passed by the Pennsylvania House of Representatives and is now before the Senate.

Commenting on the action of the Columbia Broadcasting System, Francis Biddle, counsel for The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company and the American Stores, said, "Governor Earle, having already stated his views on the bill in his special message to the House of Representatives, I am certain would be the first to resent such an attempt to prevent the presentation of the other side of the question. I am confident that the Governor would welcome an opportunity to have the people of Pennsylvania informed on this subject."

LEGION GIVES MEDAL TO HOWARD BAKER FOR ESSAY ON 'CRIME'

Presentation Made at Session of Americanization Class at W. P. A. School

WON SECOND HONORS

Anthony Russo Recently Addressed Class on Crime Prevention

Representatives of Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, American Legion, on Tuesday evening, presented Howard Baker, Edgely, with a gold medal for his splendid effort in writing his essay "Crime," expressing the value of American citizenship. The presentation was made at a session of the Americanization class, conducted under the supervision of the W. P. A., in the Wood street school building.

Joseph Schrieber, Americanization Officer of the Legion, introduced Mr. Baker, who read his essay. Mr. Baker finished second in an essay contest conducted in Bucks County by the Legion. The Bracken Post selected this class meeting as the suitable occasion for presenting Mr. Baker a medal.

Immediately following the reading of the composition, I. Johnston Hetherington, Past Commander of the Post, was introduced. Mr. Hetherington's talk was especially valuable to the class. He illustrated the different forms of the American flag from its earliest history dating back to Old England, Henry VIII.

A Scottish flag combination was the inspiration for our Pine Tree flag, significant of our country at that time. The Rattle Snake (Don't Tread On Me), the original Colonist—thirteen stars and stripes, the fifteen stars and stripes flag flying over Fort McHenry, from which Francis Scott Key found an incentive to write our National Anthem, "The Star Spangled Banner," and finally our present-day banner, were all displayed and appreciated by the group.

Representatives from the Legion were: Americanization Officer, Joseph Schrieber; Past Commander, I. Johnston Hetherington; post members, Robt. Downing and Fred Bryner.

Recently Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo addressed the Americanization class on the subject of "Crime."

Mr. Russo read from the records some statistics that were really amazing, relative to the ages of young boys who are criminals. He directed his talk to the fathers and mothers of boys who are from 15 to 25 years of age, telling them to watch the company with whom their boys are associating, and not wait until the policeman rings the doorbell and then begin to worry.

Mr. Russo told the assembled group that 80 per cent of the crime had been traced to the fact that the parents had not looked after their boys as they should.

He gave some very interesting facts about crime detection and assured the young boys that crime does not pay as the officers of the law always get their man, no matter how long it takes or how far away the trail leads.

Commemoration of Passover Will Begin Tomorrow Night

History's first emancipation proclamation and earliest blow for religious liberty will be commemorated by Jewish people throughout the world, tomorrow evening, when they initiate the holiday of Passover by telling again the story of the Exodus from Egypt.

Besides its historic message of freedom, Passover also celebrates the advent of Spring. This can be traced to an ancient agricultural aspect of the festival. In Biblical times Passover marked the barley harvest when all pious Jews would make a pilgrimage to Jerusalem and offer the first fruits with joyful ceremony and singing. The emphasis in the holiday today is placed upon the deliverance from Egyptian bondage and upon the influence which this episode in Jewish history has wielded in the history of mankind.

Denounces the Compulsory Health Insurance Measure

More than 40 members of the local Rotary Club met at the Elks' Home yesterday afternoon to listen to a prominent Philadelphia doctor discuss the compulsory health insurance measure which is now before the legislature.

The guest speaker, Dr. George Yeager, denounced the measure as against American practices and pointed out that it would corrupt the morale of practicing physicians throughout the country. He also pointed out that the same practice had been tried in both England and Germany and it had been a failure in both countries.

Dr. Yeager said that under such a program a physician would have to make more than half a hundred calls daily in order to make a living. The speaker said that doctors all over the country are arising in opposition to the proposed measure.

AIN'T

A Princeton professor of language says the word "ain't" isn't so bad. It has a good historic background. Americans have said "ain't" since 1775. Maybe this departure from usage of good English was one of their shows of independence along with the Boston Tea Party and the Continental Congress.

The indulgence comes a little late. Schools and the means of education have pretty well eradicated "ain't" from the American colloquial speech. After all, isn't contains no more letters and is a lot easier to expand into its component parts.

If the professor would tell us what to use for a common gender relative pronoun to go with such words as everybody and nobody and one without assuming that these words always refer to males, he would be getting our modern speech out of a real tangle. It is awkward for a woman to say, "One doesn't know what to do with one's hat in the theater." And it is obviously ungrammatical to say, "Everybody keeps their hats on."

What about it, Professor?

FOR WOMEN ONLY

Probably there were no objections from the men when an audience of women in Detroit applauded loudly a woman authority on etiquette who said terrible things about members of her sex, that "they are getting uglier every day," that "they diet so much they look haggard," that she wonders "how any of them ever got a man," that the trouble with women's clubs is that everybody wants to be president and after that "honored as founders or what not," and that, in conclusion—as if a conclusion were needed—"they act like a lot of empty-ump-ung-wumps."

Wise men will not reveal whether they agree with a word of that, whether they would have applauded the authority on etiquette or whether they expect to do anything about it. They won't even repeat some of the things the authority on etiquette said, although they were printed in the news report. The men, in short, are neutral—like America on the European situation. They have troubles enough of their own.

SAFE NEW YORK

The fact that the largest city in the United States has been awarded the National Safety Council's grand prize for safety progress during 1936 is worth considering. Traffic conditions in New York are not simple.

Competition for the award produced the records of more than 1,000 cities. New York's showing was a reduction in accident fatalities of 12 per cent as compared with 1935.

Investigation of methods showed that New York had attained fine team-work between public and private agencies. Campaigns to get careful driving; intelligent street planning and traffic control; an inter-precinct safety campaign using 18,000 policemen; and specialized traffic courts are mentioned as forming a "solid front" against traffic accidents.

Who remembers the old Coolidge days, when the only hobby a President rode was a good-natured electric horse?

If we'll forget the war debt Europe will let the buy-guns-the hygones.

Well, when Gilbert came, they should see!

Mr. and Mrs. Rendale left for London shortly after "breakfast." "We'll be home on the ten o'clock train tonight, Denise," her mother said. "But don't wait up for us unless you want. You'll have to make such an early start tomorrow to meet dear Gilbert."

"Yes," Denise said. Then they were gone, and she and Keith had one day left to spend together.

(On the road to Southampton, Felicia was thinking: "Today's all the time they have. That itself will bring to a crisis whatever—oh, whatever I perhaps stupidly imagine." Yet she could not have imagined that special place they exchanged, whenever they thought she was not noticing, or the excitement in their voices. . . . She hated them both!)

To Keith, these weeks of an English summer held the curious quality of a dream. Nothing settled between himself and Felicia. But all that had to be, could be settled now in a moment. . . . He did not hurry the moment, because—because from the hour he first saw Denise, he knew he loved her more than in the year before.

He meant to speak no word to her. He told himself furiously that he did not mean to be doubly a cad! He had loved her, behaved badly to her, and so lost her as he deserved. But had he, had he lost her? Her dark blue eyes regarded him; her smile was gay, tender.

Keith said to himself over and over: "I am crazy to think she's more than just courteous. Her husband will be home soon; she won't have time for me then. She's just like the darling she is—trying to reassure me."

The days that remained for them dwindled. He thought: "As soon as Gilbert comes, I'll talk to Felicia. There'll be nothing to wait for then." But surely there was nothing to wait for now! Except to cherish each hour of Denise's company that remained, since it was scarcely likely that their lives again would bring them many hours together.

Denise's unsuspecting parents, who so thoroughly disliked him and so politely endeavored to conceal that, seemed glad that she was chaperoning her sister. Sometimes their utter lack of suspicion made him ashamed. But the time grew so short that nothing mattered except to savor the little time that was left. Blessedly, they were to have their last day alone.

Well, he did not mean to mar that day by any exigent word—until when they came back from swimming, went to have tea in the garden, and he realized that day too was almost finished. He sat watching her, conscious of the warm, fragrant air, of the far-off tinkle of a fountain at the far end of the garden path.

Then he remembered! The tinkle of a fountain in the breathless scented air of a New York city garden. The precise look of Eustace Dayne's controlled, unhappy face, his voice: "You do mean to take care of Felicia." In his mind that voice echoed loud, as if Eustace were shouting it across the quiet of that English garden where he had never been.

Denise looked startled. "What is it, Keith! You had, just for a second the strangest expression, as if some thing frightened you."

He laughed uncertainly. "Some thing almost did—the sudden vividness of a memory."

"Of something that happened to us?"

"No, curiously. Of Eustace Dayne's face, of course I ever saw him." He went on slowly. "And of a promise I made to him."

He saw from her face that she understood well enough. So still she sat, with her hands folded in her lap now, those lovely hands that looked fragile as the teacups on the table.

(He thought: "A promise I made to 'Toomorrow, if you like.'") He said aloud: "Denise, I'd rather you were sure. It's you that I will love always."

Wide clear, her eyes stayed fixed on his face. She did not speak.

CHAPTER XXVII

The late August sunlight shone on the downs, on the sea, through a succession of days that went swiftly past from the day of Keith's arrival until the time of Gilbert's return grew near.

In the sunshine, in the clear light air, Felicia, Keith and Denise spent their days together, as though unwilling to leave one another's sight. In the long evenings, when the moon rose and shone over the garden, over the terrace where they sat until very late, they talked together of inconsequential things—while a kind of bewilderment grew on the old faces of Michael and Sara Rendale, watching them.

Through the sunlit days, the moonlit evenings, Felicia walked proudly, her red-gold head high as ever. She would not hurry him, not now or ever. He must put an end to this comédie à trois, in his own fashion. But if he chose not? Asking her if that, she sometimes shivered in the warm sunshine.

On his first evening with them, they had some minutes alone in the garden after dinner.

Keith said: "Well, Felicia, will you divorce Eustace and marry me?"

The same question he had asked in Virginia in the springtime. Had his voice sounded more eager then? She could not remember. All the things that had happened since intervened between her and remembrance.

"Probably, Keith. Let's talk of it again, when we've got used to each other's company—after so long without."

Then, surprisingly, Denise came out into the garden—as if she were looking for them! Yet surely she must know that they wanted to be alone.

She settled herself on a garden bench, her shoulders gleaming white above that black lace dress. Felicia thought: "She's grown very seductive, Denise has."

Then she noticed Keith's face. So did he not smile at herself! That was the first time she shivered a little there in the warm dark.

"What shall we all do tomorrow?"

Denise asked. "I suppose you can't walk well yet, Keith? It's a pity. There are some gorgeous walks across the downs."

"I manage fairly well; and I want to do as much as possible to strengthen my muscles. My arm was slower recovering than my leg."

Felicia started to speak, but Denise spoke more quickly.

"Did you bring painting things? There's a view I'm mad to have you paint."

He chuckled. "Father insisted I bring canvas. My dear parent has been most enormously encouraging about my art, ever since I told him it was of no importance. It's a trifle perverse of him, but he has some notion he must encourage my ego. It's a startling change from his former attitude." He sounded as if he liked the change.

"How is your father, Keith? I like him so much," said Felicia, who knew Denise had never happened to meet him.

"Well, he's in London. I meant to tell you we sailed together. He's going to Paris, where he has friends."

"But you must bring him down first," Felicia said.

Denise merely looked at her. Yes, it was Denise's house.

"He says he's looking forward to seeing you, Felicia, that we must dine with him in two or three weeks, when he gets back from France."

His tone was reassuring then. So she knew she would have no difficulties with Keith's Sheldie the elder. One obstacle past. Her heart gave a little jump.

Denise said, as if all that was of not the least importance: "Tomorrow I'll show you that view."

Keith said: "I'd love to paint you, Denise, in that black dress."

"Oh, Keith, would you?" Denise sounded completely delighted. "Would you begin soon?"

Felicia was suddenly tense. Why, Denise was being malicious. A small pulse beat in her white throat.

Keith did not, after that evening, remind Felicia that she had said: "We'll talk about it later." But he reminded Denise of the portrait the next morning.

And from that time on, an inner rage beset Felicia, flaming up and dwindling as Denise laughed at Keith's jokes, or fell silent sometimes, seeming preoccupied more with her own thoughts than with him.

Through the sunlit days, the fragrant evenings, Denise moved with a kind of breathlessness. All very well to decide to have what one wanted, and not think of other people. She'd known since she walked down that staircase, saw Keith smiling up at her, that what she wanted was Keith's arms round her, and the whole year blotted out. But—his handsome face was scarred and would be always; Felicia's bright beauty was dimmed, grown less young. Keith Sheldie had gone from Denise to her sister. Denise Rendale had gone from Keith to her husband. Perhaps, even with his arms round her, they could not long pretend that they were as they used to be, as young, care-free, newly in love.

She made no gesture of love to him, nor he to her. In the mornings, he painted her portrait, with Felicia's rather bored audience to the painting. In the afternoons they three walked or swam, or went for long drives, or lay on the sand and chattered politely, like well-behaved guests on a long house-party.

Once Felicia said to her: "You're very generous to us with your company, Denise."

She answered: "I thought you wanted to be thoroughly chaperoned, for a change."

She was sorry for that sharp speech, but when she turned to tell Felicia she was sorry, Felicia was gone.

Denise had a cable from Gilbert, saying that he was on his way to New York, and would sail on the first fast ship he could get. But what would she say to him?

Some days after that cable, she came back from driving her mother to the London train for a day's shopping, to find Felicia in the hall waiting for her.

"They telephoned another cable from Gilbert. He's sailing on the Normandie. I copied it down for you."

"Odd," said Denise; "he likes English ships best, usually."

"I suppose this was the most convenient sailing."

Denise was reading the scribbled message: "Sailing Normandie arrive Southampton Thursday all love."

So in six days he would arrive! Felicia quoted: "So make the most of what ye yet may spend."

Denise looked at her. Something scornful in Felicia's white face!

There were six days, five days, four days, three days left; and nothing was resolved in Denise's heart. Two days before the Normandie was scheduled to dock, Felicia said at breakfast: "Think I'll go to London tomorrow, and leave Keith and Denise to amuse each other."

"I'm going up with your mother," her father said. "We'll all take the same train."

"No, if you don't mind, Father, I'd like to start at sunrise and drive. It would be fun to see the country."

"Such a long drive!" Sara Rendale protested.

"Well, I may stay in town overnight."

"But then you may not be here for Gilbert's arrival."

"He's not coming to see me," Felicia said dryly.

On Wednesday morning she did start a little before sunrise, but for Southampton. True that the Normandie docked Thursday, but Gilbert was aboard the Merrittaria. She had changed the message on a sudden angry impulse when she copied it down. Denise had been too interfering. A little herself.

Occasionally during the interval between changing that message, and waiting for the Merrittaria's arrival, what she had done troubled her. Perhaps Gilbert would wireless as he neared England. But she could just say she'd mistaken the original cable, and no harm done. But he did not happen to wireless.

Keith finished Denise's portrait that week. It was a charming thing. They both seemed very pleased about it—and Felicia's determination hardened, watching them. They made it plain enough she was less

This is the story the radio kept from you

Thursday night the Columbia Broadcasting Company would not permit us and two Pennsylvania citizens to discuss the Store Tax Bill during the A & P Band Wagon, a radio program that reaches the people of Pennsylvania through 3 stations, WCAU, WJAS, WHP. We wanted to use these Pennsylvania Stations in discussing this bill because the Store Tax has been one of the principal topics of conversation among the voters of Pennsylvania. It has raised protests in the editorial columns of many of the leading papers in the State. It has been reported in the news columns, and widely advertised. Two respected citizens of Pennsylvania thought that Pennsylvanians would like to hear about the bill through their radio stations. They volunteered to talk about it on the air.

Although the Columbia Broadcasting Company insisted that these talks be withheld from you on the A & P program, the newspapers of Pennsylvania are willing to let these two citizens exercise their right of free speech. We are especially eager to have you hear the stories of these two citizens because one of them, Eleanor Davis, has played a prominent part in consumer organizations, and the other, G. A. Boger, is President of the Lehigh Valley Cooperative Farmers Association in Pennsylvania.

HOW THE STORE TAX BILL WILL AFFECT THE CONSUMER

Condensed from a radio talk which was to have been given Thursday night by Eleanor Davis

"I am not interested in chain stores, but I am interested in anything that makes a life easier for human beings. I think that if the Store Tax Bill is passed it will make living in Pennsylvania just a little harder for all of us.

"The chain stores have developed a system of bringing food from the farmer to you, cheaply and efficiently. Thousands and thousands of Pennsylvanians trade in chain stores. They do so to save money. I am not giving a testimonial advertisement for chain stores—the testimonial is on the part of the people of Pennsylvania. Just reading from the record, chain stores really have done a good job in reducing the cost of living.

"It is not the welfare of the chain store companies that the public should be concerned about. The important thing to you and to me is that chain stores bring food to us cheaply. In plain words, they sell food to us at low prices.

"The Store Tax Bill would be a burdensome tax on chain stores. If it goes through it will tax each store in the most popular chains more than many of them make in a whole year. There are nearly 4000 chain stores in Pennsylvania that do not make enough to pay their part of the tax. Most of these are the smaller stores that you see in every neighborhood and every community in the State. The chain store companies tell me that many of these familiar little food stores make less money for their companies than the youngest full-time clerk working in them.

"This is a tax that would fall on you. The price of food would go up. Food is already up in price. A rise in food prices is just the same as a cut in salary. When food prices are higher people have to buy less food—exactly as if their wages had been cut. To a family on relief, or a large family with few dollars a week, or even a family with moderate income, an increase in the cost of living is just as serious as having less money come in on Saturday night.

"I think the women of Pennsylvania ought to make a strong protest to their Senators against the Store Tax Bill. If the people of Pennsylvania do not want chain stores, there's a very simple way of getting rid of them—stop trading in their stores. Or if we are going to get rid of chain stores by law, isn't it good sense to do it in ways that will not increase the cost of food?

"Under the Store Tax Bill, a little neighborhood chain store making $500. a year would pay a tax of $500. A huge department store making $1,000,000 a year would pay a tax of $1. That is discriminating taxation—a type of taxation the American people have always hated because it is unfair.

"The Store Tax Bill is supposed to tax bigness, but it won't do that. It will penalize only one type of bigness—the bigness that comes of having many stores.

"The public decides whether a business is to grow or not—with its patronage. I hope that Pennsylvania won't be too hasty in legislating against bigness based on efficiency. If we do, we are going to lose the advantages that only a big company can give us.

"The Store Tax Bill is really a sales tax—a concealed sales tax on food. Sales taxes have been definitely turned down by the present Administration in Pennsylvania already.

"Last year California passed a Store Tax Act just like this one, graded up to $500. a store. Then they put it up to the people to vote upon. The people voted against it in 57 out of 58 counties. You can defeat it NOW, in Pennsylvania, before it becomes law. Let your Senator know what you think. He WANTS to know."

HOW THE STORE TAX WILL AFFECT THE FARMER

A condensation of a radio address which was to have been given Thursday night by G. A. Boger, President of the Lehigh Valley Cooperative Farmers Association

"I'm sorry the radio people would not let me go on last night, because there were a lot of farmers interested in what I had to say. I have been a farmer all my life and I know farmers and I understand what they're up against. One thing they like is a chance to be heard. That's why so many farmers like the National Administration—it's willing to listen to them.

"I want to second what Miss Davis has to say. A farmer in Pennsylvania is just as much of a customer as he is a producer. He's one of the best customers the chain stores have. I looked up the figures and I see that about one-third of the chain grocery stores customers are in the rural communities so, number one, we don't want the store tax, because it's going to cost us money. We think we ought to have the privilege of buying our groceries where we please, and where we please is where the prices are lowest.

"The chain store companies have found a way of getting our crops to market cheaper than anybody else, and this means millions and millions of dollars in the farmers' pocket. You people in the city have only so much money to spend for food, you know that, and every cent that it costs to get our potatoes or milk from our farms to you means just one cent less the farmer can have. If you were shipping products into the city every day, you'd understand what I mean, so I want to say, in plain words—the farmers want to come out flat-footed against any legislation that monkeys with the marketing of our products. That's what the Store Tax Bill will do if it's passed, and that's why we're against it. Right here in Pennsylvania the chain stores have helped us potato growers organize the marketing of their crops. They've helped us to set up grading stations and put through grading standards. They've got up methods of packaging our Pennsylvania potatoes. Today we aren't afraid of any potato grown whether it comes from Idaho or Maine and for the first time in years Pennsylvania farmers are getting a premium price for their potatoes. The chain stores have done that.

"Dairy farmers tell us that the chain stores have increased the sale of Pennsylvania class 1 fluid milk, and they pay the highest prices for it too. That's saying something, because the sale of milk was a pretty tough job for every farmer in Pennsylvania. That's until the chains helped them out. Not only in Pennsylvania, but all over the Country chain stores have helped farmers lick the surplus crop question. Take beef, just as an example of what the chain stores have done to help farmers move surplus products. You remember the terrible drought last year. On the nineteenth of June there came a cry for help. Millions of farmers faced ruin. Almost immediately the chain store organizations went into action. 33,892 chain stores participated with every force at their command. And they got instant results. Beef sales in August, 1936, were increased 34.7% over August, 1935. And the income of the farmers who raised cattle, instead of being wiped out, was increased 37% over the average for the preceding five years. The chain stores have been life savers also in helping the growers of peaches, apples, grape fruit, turkeys and lamb and other farm products. In the last year, they've saved thousands of farmers from almost certain ruin by jumping in and helping sell crops that were so big they would have rotted on the ground or been a dead loss.

"The Chain Store Tax Bill would increase the prices of the products the farmer buys and decrease the price of the farm products he sells. If I'm any judge, as head of one of the largest groups of farmers in Pennsylvania—the Lehigh Valley Cooperative Farmers—every farmer in the State is going to take pen in hand and tell his Senator about it."

to understand they had agreed upon. I inquired from Mr. Turner if they intended to change their entire plan of action. He said that on reconsideration they had determined that, in view of the fact they had minority stockholders, they would have to contest the suit.

"This, of course, breaks up the entire plan of the Department of Forests and Waters. We cannot expect to ask an appropriation until the status of this canal is settled.

"I have notified Mr. Turner that in view of their change in position, we will amend the bill in equity, putting in an alternative provision requiring them to restore the canal to navigable condition at their own expense.

"I thought it well for the people of the Delaware Valley to know what the situation is. It is a surprising and complete change of attitude on the part of this company."

Counsel for the association, John Ross, of Doylestown, writing to Mr. Taylor, the secretary, says:

"It is our opinion that a forfeiture ought to be decreed by the Dauphin county court, but if the court does not find a forfeiture we do not see how it can make any other decision but to order the canal company to restore the canal to navigable condition at its own expense as requested by the Commonwealth's amended bill."

Adopt a Resolution of Sympathy, Loss of J. Snyder

ANDALUSIA, Mar. 26—John H. Snyder, who died Saturday, had been an active worker in the Church of Redeemer for a number of years, and was one of a group of men, who with the able assistance of the rector, the Rev. Walter Marvin, were instrumental in having the church made independent May 6th, 1925. He was one of the first Vestrymen of the church, and also junior warden. The funeral service, Tuesday, at his home Bristol Pike, was conducted by the Rev. Percy Brown, of All Saints Church, Torresdale, assisted by the Rev. Herman Doe, of the Baptist Church, Andalusia.

The following resolution of sympathy has been adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased the Almighty to remove from our midst by death, our esteemed friend, John H. Snyder, who has for many years occupied a prominent rank in our midst, maintaining under all circumstances a character untarnished, and a reputation above reproach.

Therefore, Resolved, That in the death of Mr. Snyder we have sustained the loss of a friend whose fellowship it was an honor and a pleasure to enjoy; that we bear willing testimony to his many virtues, to his unquestioned probity and stainless life; that we offer to his bereaved family and mourning friends over whom sorrow has hung her sable mantle, our heartfelt condolence, and pray that Infinite Goodness may bring speedy relief to their burdened hearts and inspire them with the consolations that Hope in futurity and Faith in God give even in the Shadow of the Tomb.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be printed in the local paper and a copy forwarded to the bereaved family.

Two Are Widowed By Crash

Newark, N. J., Mar. 26—Two women were widowed by the death of the senior pilot at the death of the Pittsburgh airplane crash.

Captain Frederick L. Bohnett, first pilot, lived with his wife at Jersey City.

The junior pilot, Howard Warwick, lived with his wife and two-year-old son, Tommy, at East Orange, N. J. At the home of the dead stewardess, Doris Hammons, of Newark, three other TWA hostesses with whom she shared an apartment, mourned her death today, but said the tragedy would not interfere with their own careers in the air.

ASHTABULA, O.—Mrs. Fred Alexander thought it was a joke when her husband, Ashtabula fire chief, drove up to the front door with a big fire pump-truck. "I'm not joking," her fireman-husband said, pointing to smoke issuing from the roof, and directing his men to set to work. A neighbor had turned in the fire alarm but had neglected to inform Mrs. Alexander.

SURPRISE THE CHILDREN WITH NOVEL ICE CREAM HAY WAGON

Of course, ice cream always is popular with the children, for every-day, as well as party occasions.

Don't hesitate to serve ice cream for boys and girls, for authorities agree that it is nutritively a valuable food, as well as a delightfully delicious dessert.

The promise of ice cream ahead often will coax children to eat other foods, and ice cream can be blended with other dishes in many ways.

This extends even to cereal, for one mother suggests this tempting dish: Place a scoop of ice cream in dessert dish. Pour over this any canned fruit with syrup. Top with any dry flake cereal.

A generous serving of ice cream in a cup of steaming hot cocoa also hits the spot, giving the beverage new flavor and a creamy taste. Try that one on the afternoon bridge club. Now for the novel Ice Cream Hay Wagon, which goes over big at children's parties.

Put Oysterettes on ends of two toothpicks—one cracker on each end, putting these ends through the centers of the crackers. Thus the axles and wheels of a wagon are formed.

Lay two sugar wafers flat on the toothpicks for the bottom of the wagon. Put animal crackers on the ends of two toothpicks and place in front of the wagon for the pair of horses.

When ready to serve, put a scoop of ice cream on the wafers and you have a wagon loaded with "hay"—and all of it is good to eat except the "axles."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Sharp Hints

Never put good paring knives or carving knives in the dishpan, or leave them in the sink.

In addition to the danger of cut fingers, when the sharp blade is hidden by suds, hot water will ruin the handles, so that they soon loosen and gradually rot. The blades are soon dulled on knives that are washed regularly with the sink.

Bufler Flower Pot

A flower pot of walnut and birch is the latest and newest addition to the list of attractive wooden tableware. This little pot, with its glossy finish and interesting graining, is as well made as any piece of fine furniture. It has a tin pot inside it, so that it is practical for holding flowers in a modern buffet setting.

The National Bird

The 1937 slogan coined in Albany, "A National Bird for a National Holiday" apparently brought results, for statistics indicated that more turkeys were sold around the Washington's Birthday date than ever before.

The move to boost turkey buying, and help the heavily-stocked raisers to connect with the market was developed through the plentiful supply of choice turkeys this year. Now a campaign is under way to extend the trade.

ditional turkey season to include the February 22 anniversary.

The turkey-publicity also reminded readers that George Washington was a turkey raiser.

"LET'S HAVE LAMB" SAYS FREE MENU BOOK OFFERED CONSUMERS BY HELPFUL STATE SERVICE

"Let's Have Lamb," says a new illustrated recipe and menu book just published by the Consumers' Information Service, Department of Agriculture and Markets, at Albany, N. Y.

This interesting book, containing lamb menus for breakfast, luncheon or dinner, is just another branch of the worthwhile service now being conducted by this little-known department.

The Consumers' Service is performing valuable work in acting as a connecting link between the market and the anxious home buyer, printing accurate weekly information on the supply and quality of meats, fruits and vegetables.

Many butchers are featuring lamb just now among their meat "specials." Lamb especially commends itself because it is easily adapted to combine with numerous other foods.

Now that the buying of lamb is a matter of state concern, it behooves the homemaker to read the list of official reasons advanced for buying lamb today. Here they are:

"Lamb will be liked by the whole family—and it is good for the whole family."

"Lamb is completely and easily digested by young and old alike."

"Lamb is tender, delicious and easily prepared and served in a wide variety of ways."

4TH GRADE STUDENTS
LAUD THE "GYM" TEAM

By Louis Tomlinson

Coach Bill Dougherty, Roman "Fli" Pico and the whole "Gym" team were receiving congratulations in the form of letters from one of the lower grades of a local school today in appreciation of the fine exhibition presented to them by the Bristol High Gym team under supervision of Coach Dougherty.

Most of the students seemed overwhelmed with the "marvelous" demonstration the gym team gave on the various pieces of the apparatus. But more so than the whole team generally, they especially enjoyed the wonderful exhibition given by their "hero," "Fli" Pico, for whom they couldn't find enough praise. They also seemed to enjoy immensely the tap dancing, minuet, and "the boy with the torches." And finally they were pleased with the "pose" on the parallel bars at the end of the "act."

My words cannot express the joy these students received from the exhibition, so in order that you may appreciate this class's appreciation of it, I have here re-written the letters exactly as they were sent to the school the other day. None of the original letters has been changed but written as they wrote—spelling, punctuation, and the actual letter. This is not done to show any stupidity on their part but to show the public how they expressed their humble appreciation of the show put on for their benefit.

And to further understand this, let me reproduce the letter received from their instructors:

Fourth Grade,
Washington Street School,
Bristol, Pennsylvania,
March 22, 1937.

Dear Coach and "Gym" Team:
These letters may be a bit crude but let me assure you that they are sincere.

We are all very proud of you and of the fact that you are a little bit unusual. Each exhibition I have seen has been a revelation to me and truly an education to our pupils. We thank you.

May we wish you every success in your further activities.
Don't forget to appreciate your Coach!

Most sincerely yours,
GRACE SHAVER,
4th Grade Teacher.

And here are the students' form of congratulations to the team:
Dear friends:

I enjoyed very much the gym exhibition you showed us. I hope we can come next year to see the gym exhibition.

Everyone in the class enjoyed it very much. They all hope that they can come next year.

Yours very sincerely,

J. L.

(Note: all used the same complimentary close.)

Dear Pico:

I like you the best and the comedy. I enjoy you very much. I wished I could see you every day. I like your little brother too. I think you did the best tricks.—G. M.

Dear Pico:

We liked the Gym meat this morning. And the posed on the apparatus at the end. The dancers were good. The comedy made me laugh (laugh). The boy with torches good. All the children thought it was great fun. But the best part was the comedys.—A. F.

Dear tap dancers:

I like the tap dancing you did very much. What a good time you gave us this morning. I like the comedy a little bit more than some of the other activities. It make me laugh and all the boys and girls around me. We certainly thank each one of you. If we work in school we would miss a good exhibition. I am glad I did not miss school this morning. We like to do something for you some time. We all thought it was great fun. I'm going to do what you's done when I am grow up.—W. C.

Dear Gym Team:

What a good time we had. We liked big Pico the most. The comedy was the best of all of the show. We appreciate the good time you gave us. We liked the wand drill to. We liked the three tap dancers two Brags and one Fisher. We liked the boy with the torch a lot. Boy did we like the ones who went on the trapeze. We liked the whole program. We hope you will be there next year.—W. A.

P. S.—We did not like it when the show closed. We think the three tap dancers would be very good on a radio program.

Dear Roman Pico: I enjoyed the comedy and how you did your tricks. I liked your brother's too. I liked when you wan on the pole climbing.—N. G.

Dear Gym Team:

We are glad that we were able to go and see your Gym members do tricks. We like when they posed on the apparatus at the end of the exhibit. We enjoyed the comedy very much. We liked the tricks they did on the rings. We liked where they did the tricks on the high bar. We liked where they climbed the poles. We like when they did tricks with the sticks (wands).—L. L.

Dear Big Pico:

I liked the way you climbed up on the poles and when you swung on the trapeze tell the others. I liked them to and allow your brother I liked the comedy and the tap dancing most of all the comedy. Tell doc, I liked it.—N. H.

Dear Gym Team:

What a good time you gave us this morning. We all liked it very much. This morning. And pico and the dancing and the comedy was liked bit better than the other ones. We certainly thank you We'd like to do something for you sometimes. We all thought it was great fun.—S. S.

Dear Fry:

You did a swell job on pulling out the mat and I enjoyed watching you see I hope you will be on next year as it is fun to see you do tricks next to Pico I like you best although the others are good also.—Joe Palooka.

Dear friends:

I liked about the funies I liked the guy on the flying trapeles and pico was the best of all of them and the man with the lamps and the little kid that went on the rings.—C. C.

These letters were written in the afternoon classes on Monday, March 22, after all the grade schools of Bristol (except the high school grades) saw the gym exhibition presented to them in the morning. This necessitated no morning classes which of course in itself made the grade students happy besides the enjoyment received from the exhibition.

ROHM & HAAS BOWLERS
RESUME MATCH TONIGHT

By Louis Tomlinson

The second of three bowling matches to decide the championship of the Rohm & Haas and the Charles Lenning Co., a branch of the former company, in the realm sport will take place tonight on the home alleys of both companies.

There are two teams representing each firm—Blue and White—one of which plays at home and the other away for the first two matches, then on a neutral alley on the third night.

One company team must win at least 10 of a possible 18 points in order to be declared the winner. Should there be a tie, the total pins of both the blue and white teams will be compiled and the company with the highest combined total pins will claim right to the title. Last week, in two matches, with a possible total of six points, the teams split the points, each winning three. The Bristol Blues playing at Bridesburg lost all three of its matches last week, but the Whites playing at home won all three of its matches to even the score; consequently the score is 3-3 at the end of the first match, with seven points needed to win the title.

Tonight the Blue team will roll on the Recreation alleys while the Whites will clash at Bridesburg as the second match gets under way. Of course both of the losing teams last week will naturally be seeking revenge for their defeat in the opening matches. Therefore the sets tonight should be interesting all the way.

The local company's team is composed of:

Whites—Wenzel, Yates, Korkle, Monaco, Hirsch, Sharkey.
Blues—Stewart, Kendig, Encke, Phipps, Boyd, Pfaffentrath.

CHET CASTOR TO FIGHT
IN NEW YORK, APRIL 3

Chet Castor, Bristol's sensational flyweight champion, and only boy to bring back a boxing title to Bristol, along with Jim Robinson is to fight in St. Nick's Arena, New York, April 3rd, and at Madison Square Garden, April 12th.

Chet is also boxing Monday, March 29th, at Mason Hall, at 7th and Morris streets, Philadelphia, in an amateur tournament being held by the Junior Atlantic Championships. Chet hopes to win this title along with the two he already holds.

Chet is training very hard for these fights which are being offered to him by his many friends who are connected with the boxing game.

Chet and Jim Robinson will represent the Daggart Club in their fights in New York. Both boys are being watched by Ed Quigley, who has a string of fighters under his wing and has been in the fighting game for the past 30 years.

Exonerated of Blame
For Crash Killing Son

Highway Patrol, Deputy Coroner, Dr. James Lawler and William Deabler, Jr., Philadelphia, were the only ones to testify.

The jury comprised: Clarence G. Young, Damon Johnson, Frank Londerbough, Edward Dougherty, Fred Leyden and Allen Moyer.

The accident into which the inquisition was held occurred at Oxford Valley about one p. m., February 25th. Kreiger told how he and his three sons left Brooklyn and were enroute to Philadelphia to attend a wedding. He was driving a new car which had only been driven 122 miles.

"I might have gotten drowsy," Kreiger told the jury. "I don't know whether there was a bus ahead of me or not and I would be telling a lie if I told you I remembered what happened."

It was perfectly evident that Kreiger was terribly upset while on the stand and Coroner H. Clayton Moyer, told the jury that Kreiger had undoubtedly passed through a very trying ordeal and that it was possible that he was unable to tell just what occurred.

William Deabler, Jr., said that he and his wife were driving toward New York on the Lincoln Highway and that the car driven by Kreiger was coming in the opposite direction. Suddenly the car swung out from behind a bus, came directly across the Highway and struck the rear left of the Deabler machine. The Kreiger car shot off the roadway and struck a fruit stand, moving it back several inches. Young Kreiger was thrown out of the back of the car when the door of the machine was ripped off.

Dr. Lawler told the jury that when he interviewed Kreiger after the crash that he was emotionally upset and almost irrational. He was terribly grief-stricken, the deputy coroner said.

ing from a bullet wound inflicted by police. The holdups were staged in Philadelphia, Bucks, Montgomery and Delaware Counties.

Almerida sat on a chair during the brief court proceedings, due to his weakened condition, and twice collapsed and was revived by court officers.

The gang, during their recent hold-up career, obtained only $399 in more than a score of holdups.

It was this group which allegedly held-up and bound William Murray at Wright's Service Garage in Bristol, recently.

BIG UNIFORM PULLETS ready to lay early in the fall—that's what every poultryman wants. And that's what you get when you feed Purina Growena, the all-in-one growing feed that contains Pur-a-tene! If you feed your pullets grain or untested mash they take 7 or 8 months to come into laying. You miss the fall months when egg prices are highest.
Don't take chances this year—start your chicks on Startena, grow them on Growena. You'll have big, well-developed pullets in 5 months, you'll get eggs during the fall months when egg prices are highest. See us today for a supply of Startena and Growena.

See the difference Purina Startena makes in the way your chicks grow. Drop in at our store and take a look at those 25 little chicks that are showing you, and every poultry raiser, how chickens ought to grow . . . only 5 weeks old and they weigh almost a pound!
Tune in on Station WCAU every morning at 7 a. m. for poultry information on the "Sing, Neighbor, Sing" program.
